

Italy and crusading in the fifteenth century

Research Workshop

Accademia di Romania in Roma, piazza José de San Martín, 1, 00197 Roma
Sunday 11 October 2015, 9.00-13.00

Research on the persistence of the crusade – in theory and practice – into and beyond the fifteenth century is flourishing. Capitalizing on this broad interest, and in particular on the Leverhulme Trust's International Network entitled 'Reconfiguring the Crusade in the Fifteenth Century: Goals, Agencies and Resonances' (PI: Norman Housley), the Accademia di Romania is hosting a workshop at which speakers will address salient features of crusading in relation to the powers of the Italian peninsula, with an emphasis on the roles played by the Papacy and Venice. The workshop is open to any member of Rome's research community with an interest in the subject.

Programme

Workshop chair: Norman Housley (Leicester)

Ioan-Aurel Pop (Cluj)

Rapporti italiani e romeni nel contesto della crociata del XV secolo. Introduzione ai lavori

Marco Pellegrini (Bergamo)

Crusading and Diplomacy in Early Renaissance Italy

Iulian M. Damian (Cluj)

The Renaissance crusade: a new paradigm and its first test (1454-1456)

Dan Muresan (Rouen)

Guillaume d'Estouteville, cardinal and archbishop of Rouen, in the Papacy's eastern policy, 1451 to 1483

Serban Marin (Bucharest)

The classical crusades as viewed from 15th century Venice